

InsideOutside Circle

Students rotate in concentric circles to face new partners for sharing, quizzing or problems solving. Often students will have a question on a card that is swapped before rotating. This structure is regularly used for such topics as learning timetables, reading clock faces and general knowledge.